MISS BARNARD'S CHARGES NOT SUSTAINED

Oklahoma City, June 21.—In its report to the state board of education Friday morning the special committee of the board appointed to investigate conditions at the Pauls Valley Training school for boys and the management of the institution, declines to recommend the removal of Superintendent Nelson, as requested by Miss Kate Barnard, commissioner of charities and corrections, in her recent report. To the contrary, the report states that the committee does not know of any one else who could accomplish more than is being done by Supt. Nelson under the present circumstances.

The committee is composed of M. H. Duncan, Dr. F. B. Fite and H. C. Potterf. The investigation was conducted by Messrs. Duncan and Potterf, but concurred in by Dr. Fite. The committee submitted a lengthy report to the board at its meeting Friday morning, in which not only is the management of the Pauls Valley institution commended, but the correctness of the findings of the commissioner of charities and corrections is questioned to a certain extent. The investigation by the committee was conducted at Pauls Valley on June 11. The commissioner's report was taken to Pauls Valley and its findings were investigated i nthe closest detail by the committee. The committee was unable to verify the findings, according to the report.

TRIAL IN KNABE CASE GOES OVER

Indianapolis, Ind., June 21.—The trial of Dr. William B. Craig, of this city, and of A. M. Ragsdale, an undertaker, upon the charge of having murdered Dr. Helene Knabe in October, 1911, had been set for next Monday, but as the trial is expected to be quite lengthy and it was considered undesirable to carry it through the hot Summer months, the agreement is said to have been reached to let the case go over until some time in the fall. The trial promises to be one of the most interesting and sensational ever heard in Indianapolis and will, undoubtedly, attract countrywide attention.

The death by murder of Dr. Helen Knabe on the night of October 23, 1911, was one of the most mysterious cases in the criminal history of this city and, in the minds of many persons, who firmly believe in the innocence of the accused men, is still an unsolved mystery. The victim of the crime, Dr. Helen Knabe, was about thirty-five years at the time of her death, unusually attractive, and highly respected for her excellent character and her scientific attainments. She was born in Germany, as the daughter of a civil engineer in the German army. She had received a good education in her fatherland and came to the United States to satisfy her ambition to become a doctor. She graduated from the Indiana college of medicine and continued her studies even after she had established herself in this city as a regular practitioner. Besides attending to her steadily growing practice Dr. Knabe delivered lectures on pathology at several colleges, including the Indiana veterinary college, of which Dr. Craig the principal defendant in the coming trial, is the dean. For several years she was state bacteriologist, but she resigned this position a short time before her death to gain more time for her practice and her studies. She had a wide circle of acquaintances but only few intimate friends, and, it is believed, no enemies.

Dr. Knabe lived and had her office on the first floor of an apartment house located on a busy street corner. The apartment occupied by Dr. Knabe was in the corner of the building and had windows to both streets. She lived alone, but employed an office girl, Gatherine McPherson, who came in the morning and attended to the work in the living rooms and the office during the day, leaving for her own home early in the evening. When Miss McPherson came to Dr. Knabe's apartment on the morning of October 24, 1911, she found all windows closed, contrary to the habit of her employer who believed in a plentiful supply of fresh air. Dr. Knabe was on her bed, dressed only in her night gown, which was rolled up under her arms, leaving the body bared. Her throat had been cut by a powerful gash, but no knife or other weapon could be found and there were only a few traces of blood upon the bed and upon her body. Miss McPherson called physicians, but they could only establish the fact that Dr. Knabe had died several hours before as a result of the wound in her throat.

The authorities were notified and the police made a careful investigation, without being able to find any clue that would throw the faintest light upon the mystery of the case. Notwithstanding the fact that no weapon could be found in the apartment and the even more baffling absence of blood upon the bed covers or in any part of the room where the body was found, the police in the end advanced the absurd theory that Dr. Knabe had committed suicide and abandoned further investigation.

Immediately after the discovery of the crime Jefferson Haynes, the colored janitor of the apartment house and several members of his family were arrested, but there was no evidence to connect them with the murder and they were finally discharged from custody. Their testimony shed no light whatever upon the mysterious case.

After the police had given up the investigation, the Indianapolis Council of Women, composed of some of the most prominent women in Indiana undertook to solve the mystery. They employed H. C. Webster, a private detective to hunt the murderer. It was upon the findings of his investigation that the grand jury based the indictment found on December 31, 1912, against Dr. William B. Craig as principal and Alonzo M. Ragsdale as accessory to the crime. It was shown to the grandjury that Dr. Craig and Dr. Knabe had been intimate friends for a long time and that Dr. Knabe insisted upon Craig marrying her. It was also shown that on the evening before her death Dr. Knabe had visited the Craig home. It was also pointed out that the person who committed the murder was a person thoroughly familiar with human anatomy. Dr. Craig has been at liberty under $15,000 bail.

FROM SOUTHWESTERN STUDENTS CONFERENCE

Winslow, Ark., June 19, 1913.

I will write a short letter to the Evening News and its many readers. The daily visits of the News are a great pleasure to us four boys, that are representing the E. C. S. Normal in the Southwester nStudent Conference, that is being held at Winslow.

The town of Winslow is a flourishing little town, 2000 feet above the sea level, on the Frisco line, forty-seven miles north of Ft. Smith.

Students come to deepen their lives and to carry back a great message into their colleges. The daily program gives one an idea of the inner workings. The mornings are given over (1) to study classes in the Bible, (2) to a discussion by the students of the outstanding problems of moral and religious work in colleges and the most approved methods of dealing with these problems, (3) to a study of the problems of social service and life investment, and (4) to hearing addresses from some of the outstanding student leaders. The afternoons are free for various forms of recreation. The grounds have facilities for baseball, track, basket-ball, volley-ball a new game to me, tennis and mountain climbing have a prominent place in the life of the gathering. The contests in basket-ball, track and tennis are the most spirited, and Oklahoma and Texas are the most noted contestants. Classes in some of the pressing needs of humanity at home and in mission fields are held after supper, and there is also an address on the outstanding opportunities for life investment.

Perhaps the most uplifting feature o fthe whole conference is the opportunity offered of hearing addresses from men who are great workers and thinkers. Many go away from the conference with their whole attitude of life lifted and moulded by purpose. It is no small privilege to be in a gathering where some of the best and strongest speakers of this nation and foreign nations are to be found; such as Prof. A. M. Trawick, Nashville, Tenn., Dr. W. D. Weatherford, Nashville, Tenn., Rev. Jno. A. Rice, Ft. Worth, Tex., Judge Clifford Rowe, Chicago, Prof. C. H. Brough, University of Arkansas, a Boer, from South Africa, I forgot his name, and many others. The object and work of the conference indicates the decided trend toward unity, for men of all denominations have come together for a cause and not for church backbiting.

I guess I had better bring my letter to a close as it is growing rather lengthy. We will be back in a few days and if any one cares to know any more about the conference we will tell you if we can.

I am yours respectfully,
WILBURN CARTWRIGHT.

There is only a few days left before we move to our new place east of Sam Shaw's Department Store, opposite Harris Hotel. During that time you can buy anything in the Furniture line nearly at Wholesale Prices.

Hoboes are having a hard time in Kansas. Every one that can be found is put to work in the harvest fields whether he wants to go or not. Farmers are searching freight trains when they stop at a station to find some stowaway who might be of more use in the harvest field.

Owing to the fact that the commissioners of Johnston county have raised the renditions of most of the taxpayers, citizens of Wapanucka are threatening to secede and join Coal county, while those of Mannsville, on the extreme west, are making a threat of casting their lot with Marshall county.

Present indications are that Pontotoc will be one of the very few counties in Oklahoma whose tax rolls will show an increase over 1912. Most of them are going the other way. No particular complaint is being heard against the tax assessor, which it must be inferred that the increase is due to the fact that Pontotoc county is still leading the march of progress.

Miss Sadie Lovelace, one of the progressive delegation of teachers from Seminole county attending the Ada normal, sends a weekly news letter to the Wewoka Democrat telling of the work of the normal in general and of Seminole county in particular. This is another indication of the extreme loyalty and cordial feeling existing among teachers in adjoining counties for the Ada school, and the News desires to compliment the lady for her good work.

Violin 253 Years Old.

Robt. Meadows, who lives six miles east of Ada, received a violin by express Saturday from Leslie, Ark., that was made in Italy in 1660, thus making it 253 years old. It is a rare old piece of workmanship, looking old and worn, yet the inlaid pearl trimmings, with the outline of an ancient castle artistically executed, show that the work was done by a master hand. The woodwork is hand carved and the head of some ancient violin master adds beauty and interest to this ancient relic.

The chautauqua opened this afternoon with a concert by the Fraternity Glee Club. This club will probably also furnish a part of the program for this evening.

CANADIAN BRIDGE SAFE FOR PASSAGE

The Katy bridge across the Canadian was sufficiently repaired Friday to permit trains to pass over and they are now running on time. The recent rise, which is said to be the highest since the flood of 1904, changed the channel to the south side of the river and damaged the bridge as stated.

This evening the De Sota will present another two-reel Broncho entitled: "The Drummer of the Eighth." It is full of action and stir from the first to the last and is a typical Broncho, which is another way of saying it is first class. The De Sota contest is growing in interest every day.

THREE INDIANS OF NOTE

LEADERS IN IMPORTANT EPOCHS OF TRIBAL HISTORY.

But few men in the history of Oklahoma have left a deeper impress on the religious and social status of the state—whose deep piety, educational attainments and broad and liberal statesmanship still remain a lasting heritage—than Allen Wright, one of the most gifted Choctaws of the tribe and one who was, to his people, what John Ross was to the Cherokees and Cyrus Harris to the Chickasaws. He was born in Mississippi and came with his people to Oklahoma when the migration was made in the early thirties. The vicissitudes and hardships of that sad and unfortunate event in Choctaw history, left a lasting impression on him and after graduating from Union College, Shenectady, N. Y., he returned to his people and devoted his life to their up-building. His people appreciated his abilities and during a long and illustrious life he was constantly their advisor and counsellor reaching the chieftainship of the tribe. He translated into Choctaw language the Psalms, and his translation of the Chickasaw constitution, although himself a Choctaw, into the language of that tribe was so complete that the Chickasaw Council accepted and published it in 1880.

Among the well known and highly respected citizens of the state are the following children of Mr. Wright: Dr. Elizabeth N. Wright of Olney, Okla.; Rev. F. H. Wright of Dallas, Texas; Hon. Allen Wright Jr. of McAlester; James B. Wright. Miss Katherine Wright. Mrs. Mary Wallace, Mrs. Richards and Mrs. Anna Ludlow all of Wapanucka, Okla.

To Standing Bear, a full blood Poncha, the Indians of today owe more than to any other Indian who has lived in the last half century. To his devotion to his people and their interests, his integrity and eloquence, the policy of the United States government towards the Indians as wards underwent a complete change. The entire country became aroused over the methods that had previously been pursued and an enraged and enlightened citizenship caused a reversal of the methods and manners heretofore pursued, and while but 300 Ponchas' still live in Oklahoma, several descendants of this famous chief are now citizens of the state.

In 1877 the government ordered the tribe to the Indian country—now Oklahoma—and Standing Bear, with other representatives reluctantly started southward from Nebraska to situate their home and reservation. They had lived so long on the banks of the Niobrara that the thought of leaving their homes around which were clustered the memories of years and years of happiness, that when near the Oklahoma line they started back without sufficient funds and clothing for the journey which was made in the winter. They reached the old reservation and asked for land and seed to cultivate a crop. They were pastorial in their ways and were not warlike as were other tribes who at that time inhabited the plains. The request was granted and shortly afterward Standing Bear and the others, who had made the return journey with him, were arrested and returned to Oklahoma. In the tribal journey here and the long and severe winter over a third of their number had died among whom was a son of Standing Bear. The pitiful condition aroused the people and Standing Bear visited many cities pleading for a square deal for his people. Under court order many were returned and even the United States Senate investigated the charges brought by Standing Bear and the removal of the tribe. He died but five years ago and his bones are whitening near the banks of the Niobrara—a stream he loved so well.

Big Jim, a full blood Shawnee, figured prominently in the early history of Oklahoma—from 1868 to 1900. He was of illustrious lineage, his grandfather being no less a personage than Tecumseh whom Trumball, the historian states, was the most extraordinary Indian character in United States history. Big Jim's father was the only son of Tecumseh, and one of the signers of the treaty between the Cherokees and affiliated tribes (the Absentee Shawnees being one of the tribes) and the Republic of Texas. He possessed none of the belligerent traits of character of his paternal ancestor but was a man of calm deliberation, conservative manner and wholly devoted to his people. He believed fully the Indian legend that the earth was his mother and that tilling the soil wounded her. So strong was that belief he refused, from strictly religious scruples, to take on the ways of the white man and when his judgment told him that the time was fast approaching when he and his people must abandon their aboriginal ways he left for Mexico to find a home from the molestation of the white man. He died in Mexico in 1901. The present chief of the tribe is Tonomo son of Big Jim.

FELT BAD ALL THE TIME

Shellhorn Lady Suffered a Great Deal, But Is All Right Now.

Shellhorn, Ala.—In a letter from this place, Mrs. Carrie May says: "A short time ago, I commenced to have weak spells and headaches. I felt bad all the time, and soon grew so bad I couldn't stay up. I thought I would die.

At last my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, and it helped me; so he got some more. After I had taken the second bottle, I was entirely well.

I wish every lady, suffering from womanly trouble, would try Cardui. It is the best medicine I know of. It did me more good than anything I ever used."

Cardui is a woman's tonic—a strengthening medicine for women, made from ingredients that act specifically on the womanly organs, and thus help to build up the womanly constitution to glowing good health.

As a remedy for woman's ills, it has a successful record of over 50 years.

Your druggist sells it. Please try it.

Mexicans Observe Holiday.

City of Mexico, June 21.—An artillery salute at daybreak and the hoisting of the national flag over all public buildings today marked the anniversary of the taking of the City of Mexico by the forces of Gen. Porfirio Diaz, June 21, 1867. The fall of the capital to the Liberal troops under Gen. Diaz was a fatal blow to the Imperialists and practically ended the long war of the French invasion. The anniverary is regularly observed as a holiday.

W. W. Norton, who lives four miles west of Ada, states that the farmers of that section are well up with their work, and have their cotton cleaned out. They harvested a fine crop of oats, and Mr. Norton says that during his twenty-eight years of residence in this section he has seen no finer all round prospect than now. While corn i sneeding rain, it has not suffered much yet.

MOTORCYCLE RIDER HURT

Late Friday afternoon Ray Carville, one of the normal students, suffered a painful accident while riding a motor cycle. While making a turn his left leg was caught between the knee and ankle. The belt jerked it into the pulley and cut through the flesh to the bone. He was given prompt medical attention, however, and no serious results are expected to follow.

Mint Coin Marks.

Coins made at the Philadelphia mint have no mark, but those struck at the other United States mints have one or more letters upon them to disinguish them from those made at the Philadelphia mint, which for many years was the only mint. These letters, which are very small capitals, are found upon the reverse of the coins, with the exception of the new design double eagle and the Lincoln head cent, upon which they are on the obverse.

The letters will be found near the lower edge, and are: C for Charlotte, North Carolina, discontinued in 1861; CC for Carson City, Nevada, abandoned in 1893, D for Dahlonga, Georgia, discontinued in 1861, and for Denver, Colorado, since 1906; O for New Orleans, La., discontinued in 1906, and S for San Francisco.

Biograph's Western Masterpiece

"The Yaqui Cur"

A YOUNG INDIAN'S ATTEMPT TO FOLLOW THE WHITE MAN'S DOCTRINE IN HIS OWN ENVIRONMENTS

IN TWO PARTS

The porspector had taught the Indian boy the doctrine of peace. When his tribe resisted the attack of another tribe the boy did not take part. The din of the battle as the horsemen circled them again and again, the moans of men caught under falling horses struck terror in the boy's heart. The incensed warriors cast him from the tribe with the brand of a coward. It was then that his opportunity came to follow the white man's wonderful doctrines.

Care of Strawberry Patch After Harvest Season.

As soon as the harvest season is over, the strawberry patch should be worked out and cultivation kept up throughout the summer and early fall. The rows will have formed a wide mat, which should be narrowed and old plants removed.

One way is to "bar off" the row from each side, leaving a from eight to ten inches. Do whatever hoeing is necessary to get rid of the weeds and old plants immediately, and then cultivate so as to throw the soil back to the plants. Where the rows are "barred off" and left for any length of time they will dry out.

Another popular way is to "bar off" the row from only one side, and thus gradually work the plants into a new row each year.

Adust mulch should be kept on the plants throughout the summer and early fall in order to conserve the moisture and keep down the weeds. The loss of stand of plants is usually due to lack of proper cultivation during the proper season.—D. C. Mooring, Department of Horticulture and Botany, Oklahoma A. and M. College, Stillwater.

The Daughter of David Kerr

By Harry King Tootle

Illustrations by Ray Walters

(Copyright, 1913, by A. C. McClurg & Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Gloria Kerr, a motherless girl who has spent most of her life at school, arrives at her father's home in Belmont. David Kerr is the political boss of the town and is anxious to prevent his daughter learning of his real character.

CHAPTER II—Kendall, representing the Chicago packers, is negotiating with Judge Gilbert, Kerr's chief adviser, for a valuable franchise. They fear the opposition of Joe Wright, editor of the reform paper.

CHAPTER III—Kerr asks the assistance of Judge Gilbert in introducing Gloria to Belmont society and promises to help him put through the packers' franchise and let him have all the graft.

CHAPTER IV—Gloria meets Joe Wright at the Gilberts. It appears they are on intimate terms, having met previously in a touring party in Europe.

CHAPTER V—Gloria twits Wright on his failure to keep an engagement to meet her in Paris. He explains that the death of his mother prevented his going to Paris.

CHAPTER VI—The Gilberts invite Gloria to stay with them pending the refurnishing of the Kerr home.

CHAPTER VII—One society bud who refused to meet Gloria is forced to do so when her father is made to feel Kerr's power.

CHAPTER VIII—Wright begins his fight against the proposed franchise in the columns of his paper, the Belmont News.

CHAPTER IX — Kerr, through his henchmen, exerts every influence to hamper Wright in the publication of his paper.

CHAPTER X—Gloria realizes she is not being received by the best society and is unhappy. She takes up settlement work.

CHAPTER XI—Kerr and his lieutenants decide to buy Kerr's paper and ask the editor to meet them at Gilbert's office.

CHAPTER XII—Wright in his desire to keep from Gloria knowledge of her father's position, avoids her during the fight. Gloria is piqued.

CHAPTER XIII—Calling at Gilbert's office to solicit a donation Gloria meets Wright. He proposes and is accepted while waiting to be called into the conference.

CHAPTER XIV—Wright refuses to sell his paper and declares he will fight to a finish.

CHAPTER XV—The Belmont News appears with a bitter attack on Kerr. Gloria calls Wright a coward and refuses to listen to any explanation from him.

Feeling that she must do something to end this catechism, Gloria happened to glance at the book she held in her hand, and this led her to ask: "Wouldn't you like me to read to you?"

"Naw. I can read fer myself."

"Perhaps there is something else I might do. What do you say, I might write a letter for you?"

"A letter? Who to?"

"Isn't there some one who ought to know you are sick?"

"Who'd want to hear from me?" the woman replied sullenly. "I ain't the belle o' the village any more."

"Haven't you a mother?"

"She's dead."

"A father, then? Isn't there some one watching for you, hoping to see you come down the quiet little street?"

Here was an attempt to awaken a sentiment for the past which met with no success. Little Ella replied roughly:

"They're watching at his house all right—all right—him and that pasty-face wife of his—so they can run out and unchain the dog Then they'd gather in the parlor an' say prayers fer the dead—that's me."

"What could you have done to have your family treat you so?" Gloria asked. "What could you do to be estranged from your father, of all persons?"

This was something Gloria could not understand. Once she would not have understood a lack of love where two had lived together continuously. Now she could waive that point, but the estrangement was beyond her.

Little Ella considered the question gravely. What was she to tell this inquisitive girl who evidently was not asking questions just for the fun of prying into some one else's life? Somehow or other Gloria began to appeal to her. She had decided that the visitor's ignorance was real, not feigned. In reply to the question as to why she was not received at home, she turned her big dark eyes, lusterless now, upon Gloria, and said quietly:

"I loved."

"Oh!" exclaimed Gloria, and a sudden pain shot thro

"Oh, what?"

"Was it really love?"

The question came forth without a thought of how it might affect her hearer. It did, indeed, provoke Little Ella, taking away that kindly feeling which had begun to kindle in her heart because of Gloria's ignorance.

"Didn't I say I loved?" she demanded harshly. "What do you know of love? You can't come down here and teach me anything. Pooh! I don't believe you know what real love is. Were you ever in love?"

Ordinarily to a girl reared as Gloria had been no more serious affront could have been offered her. It was a meddling with her private affairs which was unpardonable.

"Was you?"

Little Ella asked the question again with the sharpness gained from listening to the city attorney cross-examine witnesses in police court. Seeing that she was almost compelled to say "yes" or "no," Gloria replied defiantly:

"Yes, I was."

"And yer not married?"

"No."

"Goin' to be?"

A pause.

"No."

"Say, yer overlookin' a bet. What's the matter?"

Gloria felt herself fascinated by this slight little woman who in her excitement had propped herself up in bed on a thin, trembling arm. The light had come back into her eyes as she pursued her inquiries and they shone like two burning coals.

"He didn't really love me," Gloria said more to herself than to the girl.

"Did he tell you so? How do you know?" There was no answer. "Huh! You asked me questions so I thought I'd ask you some. Did he know you loved 'im?"

"He did, but—my father discovered that he was unworthy."

This information seemed to Little Ella to be a bond of fellowship. She fell back on the bed to rest, and remarked philosophically:

"Humph! My ol' man thought the feller I loved was no good, too. Guess we've had pretty hard times, eh?" No reply, "What d' you think?"

"I—I—he was unworthy."

It was now Gloria who spoke listlessly.

"So you had to choose between 'im an' yer father?"

"Was there any choice? I gave him up."

"I left home. So, you see, I've loved more'n you've ever loved," she cried. "You didn't really love." There was scorn in her voice as she spoke. "I've gone through fire an' storm fer the man I loved, because I loved a real man. You must 'a' loved some kid at the ribbon counter. A real man wouldn't 'a' let you give him up."

This was a tribute to the animal perfection of the graceful young creature before her. The sight of Gloria as something to be desired, to be possessed, made Little Ella feel that no man with red blood in his veins would give her up without a fight. She hated her for her masses of beautiful hair, her deep, soulful eyes, her complexion of apple blossoms, and her delicate white hands. She hated her for her svelte, girlish figure and her beautiful clothes which brought out her best lines. A woman may be down in the world, but she has eyes to see.

"Look at me," she cried, beating her flat breasts with her red, bony hands. "A man died fer me—an' he thought I was worth it. Did you love a man well enough for him to do that fer you?"

Gloria could only avoid the question by tactlessly referring to Little Ella's present state.

"You don't know what you're saying. Can't you see what he's brought you to?"

"Don't you say a word against him," snapped the sick woman. "All men ain't alike, neither. It wasn't his fault I'm here. It's the system."

"The system! What's that?"

Here was the introduction of a new element. Gloria's curiosity was aroused. There was something inexorable about it, to judge from Little Ella's manner of speaking.

"Well, call it society, if you want to," conceded society's victim.

"What do you mean?"

"Say, are you stringin' me, or was you born yestiddy?"

She laughed harshly at the humor of such a question.

"I don't understand," was all Gloria could reply.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Gloria had not been reared without an understanding of the various layers of society. Of those close to her own station in life she had an intimate and intelligent knowledge, but as she went down the scale her acquaintanceship grew slighter and her understanding more vague. The poor creatures whom as a class Little Ella now represented to her were almost as foreign and as misunderstood as would be a lama of Thibet. Having no knowledge, she could have no real pity.

Gloria had never dreamed, even when she tried to put the worst possible construction on what few things she knew, that the world could be so cruel. Never for an instant had she thought that it was possible for men whom she regarded as upright and honorable to be engaged directly or indirectly in exploiting vice and ignorance. It had never occurred to her that men whom she might know, some of them owned dreary blocks of hovels and tenements from which high rents were secured only because the people who lived in them were not respectable. Poor and honest tenants could have paid but poor and precarious rents.

If you have a persistent, nagging bronchial cough beware of cough remedies. They are merely local in action, and if they do relieve it is the narcotics that do it. The very best remedy known is Swift's Sure Specific. You will find it on sale in any drug store at $1.00 per bottle. It goes straight into the blood, becomes an internal blood bath, wonderfully stimulates the increase of red corpuscles, cures all the local fever spots and irritations, increases appetite, you take on flesh and feel a wonderful sense of renewed strength. Hundreds of people worried beyond control at cough, pains in the chest, sore throat and constant expectoration of thick mucus have experienced the most wonderful change after using S. S. S. All doubt and apprehension is gone, those peculiar pains and aches vanish, there follows a period of more intense rejoicing to find that worst fears were based entirely upon a mistaken notion that cough and chest pains come from the lungs. S to-day at the drug store and then say good-bye to all those pains that have worried you.

Charlton's Three Years in Jail.

New York, June 21—Porter Charlton, whom the Supreme Court of the United States, recently decided must be returned to Italy to be tried for the murder of his wife, today completed his third year as a prisoner in the Hudson county jail in New Jersey. Mrs. Mary Scott Castle Charlton was murdered in Italy in the early part of June, 1910. The body, having been put into a trunk and thrown into Lake Como, was soon found, but not until Charlton had fled and was sea bound for New York. He arrived here on June 22, 1910, and within an hour after his arrest he confessed to the Hoboken police that he was the guilty man and guilty of the crime charged against him

Charlton was promptly commited to the Hudson county jail. He has been there ever since, while his family and counsel have exhausted every means known to the law to prevent his extradition to Italy. Two weeks ago last the last hope was lost when the Supreme Court decided that the confessed murderer must be surrendered to the Italian authorities.

It is expected that within another month young Charlton will be on his way back to Italy in the custody of the Italian police. Even had he not confessed his crime, it is believed that the young man would have little chance of escaping conviction, as under the Italian system a prisoner is supposed to be guilty until proved innocent. There is no death penalty in Italy, and if Charlton is convicted he will probabaly get a sentence of twenty years in prison, ten of them in solitary confinment.

NEW OIL TERRITORY DEVELOPED NEAR TULSA

Tulsa, Ok., June 20.—There is great excitement in oil circles as the result of the striking of a big oil well almost adjacent to the limits of this city on the south. The well flowed 800 barrels the second day after it came in. Land that two weeks ago would not bring $50 an acre in fee is selling at from $300 to $800 an acre and leases are commanding fabulous prices, in some instances $500 and $600 an acre. What adds interest to this discovery is that the well was drilled but a few yards from a dry hole in territory that for years had been considered valueless for an oil proposition. Producers predict the day is not far distant when many abandoned sections of the oil country in Oklahoma will be drilled over again with surprising results. The only fear is that a great pool of oil will be uncovered, thus flooding the market and causing the price of oil to drop.

Planing Mill Burned at Chickasha.

Chickasha, Ok., June 20.—The Garner planing mill of this city and one of the largest planing mills in Oklahoma burned this morning. The loss will be nearly $50,000. The fire started from an explosion of a gasoline furnace used in heating the glue pots of the factory. A large stock of lumber was burned with the mill.

A Good Investment

There is no better investment than a fifty cent piece in a bottle of Meritol White Liniment. Muscular and rheumatic pains, swellings, lameness promptly relieved. Meritol White Liniment is especially recommended as a general pain killer of unusual merit. Ramsey Drug Co., Ada, Oklahoma. Adv.

After spending a month at McKenzie and Nashville, Tenn., W. N. Mays says Oklahoma is still good enough for him. After becoming accustomed to the hustle of this country, he says things back there seem altogether too slow to be interesting. However crop prospects are fine.
